

We were there when kids had playgrounds instead of playstations.

When Bintang RTM was our version of Idol, and Empat Sekawan made up the original Friends.

We were there when beehives and bell bottoms got smaller, as our roads and buildings got bigger.

When mini buses disappeared from our roads to be replaced by monorails transporting us across the sky.

We remember our grandparents telling us how they walked miles to get to school. Now our children just surf and click to get the world.

We have come a long way together, Malaysia.

And there is still a long way to go.

But we are glad we are going there with you.
