

We were there when our grandparents used to hide their life savings under the bed.

We were there when our parents kept their passbooks locked up in a drawer.

We were there when most people did their banking in banking halls. These days, most people do their banking online.

We were there as the metal bars disappeared from our windows and coffee bars appeared in our lounges.

We'll be there innovating new ways to help our children save and grow their money.

(As soon as they crawl out from playing under the bed).
